Plenary Address:

Scoring Touchdowns on the Internet:

What We Can Learn from a Football Website

Barry McBride, publisher, The Orange and Brown Report (<http://cle.scout.com>)

This session will provide a backdrop for the discussion throughout the conference of the emergence of electronic media and the related legal issues, First Amendment considerations and legislative proposals.

Sports Blogging and Hot News: Must We Amend the Law To Save Journalism? (A)

Traditional sports media now competes with “news aggregators” who copy, organize and distribute news created by others. Are these aggregators data thieves who must be stopped to save journalism, or are they just exercising their First Amendment rights? Popular sports bloggers join lawyers to analyze journalist protections.

Moderator: Kevin T. Shook, attorney, Frost Brown Todd LLC, Columbus

Panelists: Craig Calcaterra, lead blogger, NBC Sports.com’s “Hardball Talk,” Columbus

Dr. Victoria S. Ekstrand, professor, Bowling Green State University
David L. Marburger, attorney, Baker & Hostetler, LLP, Cleveland
Barry McBride, publisher, The Orange and Brown Report

Copyrights, Trademarks and Internet Reporting (B)

What is the copyright “fair use” doctrine and how can you apply it in Internet reporting to avoid being sued? Who is liable for a reader’s potentially defamatory post on your news website? How do you protect your intellectual property rights online? We’ll discuss all this and more.

Moderator: Monica L. Dias, attorney, Frost Brown Todd LLC, Cincinnati

Panelists: David M. Giles, VP, deputy general counsel, The E.W. Scripps Co.; former journalist

Mike Goheen, assistant managing editor for production, Dayton Daily News

Legal Issues for Student Journalists at Ohio Universities (C)

Learn about legal issues journalists have in gaining access to records and meetings at Ohio universities. Topics include access to campus police records and search committees proceedings, and the implications of the Federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act for reporting on higher education.

Moderator: Thomas Schwartz, associate professor, Ohio State University School of Communication

Panelists: Richard M. Goehler, attorney, Frost Brown Todd LLC, Cincinnati
Amy Nash Golian, assistant chief, Education Section, Ohio

Attorney General Richard Cordray
Jill Riepenhoff, investigative projects reporter, Columbus Dispatch
Timothy D. Smith, attorney and professor, Kent State University School of Journalism & Mass Communication

Media-Bench-Bar Forum: Electronics in the Courtroom (D)

Join a roundtable discussion of hypothetical problems the legal profession and the media can expect to encounter now that tweeting and blogging have altered the courtroom atmosphere.

Moderator: Timothy D. Smith, attorney and professor, Kent State University School of Journalism and Mass Communication

Panelists: Robert P. Bartlett, attorney, Faruki Ireland & Cox PLL, Dayton
Susan Grogan Faller, attorney, Frost Brown Todd LLC, Cincinnati
